SRS Heritage Foundation, Aiken County and SRNS Cut Ribbon at SRS History Museum

AIKEN, S.C. (Oct. 28, 2014) – Officials from the Savannah River Site (SRS) Heritage Foundation, Aiken County and Savannah River Nuclear Solutions (SRNS) gathered for a ribbon-cutting ceremony to launch the new SRS Museum.

“The purpose of the SRS Museum is to tell the stories of those who spent their careers working to win the Cold War, celebrate the technical and scientific achievements of SRS employees over the past six decades, and show the impact on the CSRA by the huge influx of people moving to the region to work at the Site. This museum represents more than 10 years of planning, and I want to extend my thanks to Aiken County for providing the Dibble Library building for the museum and Savannah River Nuclear Solutions for helping the SRS Heritage Foundation get the museum off the ground,” said Walter Joseph, Executive Director, SRS Heritage Foundation.

The museum will officially open to the public in 2015. According to Joseph, there are many great resources already out there to learn about the history of the Site, and this museum will further illustrate the valuable work and missions that SRS employees have accomplished.

“Aiken County is proud to come together with the SRS Heritage Foundation and Savannah River Nuclear Solutions to share an important part of Aiken County's history. With its location on Laurens Street, the museum will be an accessible resource for Aiken County residents and visitors alike who want to learn more about the site's unique history," said Ronnie Young, Aiken County Council Chairman.

Following the ribbon-cutting ceremony, representatives from the SRS Heritage Foundation gave tours of the building and described the upcoming museum exhibit themes.

"This museum will give visitors an opportunity to travel back in time to see what it would've been like to live in Aiken during the Cold War. The generations of SRS workers will not be forgotten because of the efforts of the SRS Heritage Foundation and the generosity of Aiken County for providing the Dibble Library building for the museum," said Carol Johnson, SRNS President and CEO.

The SRS Museum is located at the former Dibble Memorial Library at 224 Laurens St., SW, Aiken, S.C. 29801.
